From the Principal

I am often asked by prospective families what is it about Lindisfarne which sets us apart from other schools. This is a question I always enjoy as it provides an opportunity to clearly outline the key benefits of an education with our school. I say current because education is always in a state of change with new teaching methods, new ways of learning and new support structures being embedded into our daily educational practice to ensure we cater for the emerging needs of students with each generation.

We are a school which keeps abreast of proven new ways of ensuring our students excel whilst they are in our care from Preschool through to graduation and the end of Year 12 through regularly reviewing and evaluating how we best assist our students towards the most important step in their life, their career.

We are in the final stages of completing our new $260,000 state-of-the-art Lecture Theatre under M Block at our Mahers Lane campus. Our aim in including this new facility is to ensure that all Lindisfarne students fully experience the unique physical setting of learning with their cohort in a lecture theatre environment in preparation for their future university education. When at university, all of their lectures will be in a similar setting and it is imperative that we prepare them for this in our school environment.

Our school has forged a strong academic reputation for excellence; 50 of our 74 graduates from 2012 being offered early entry into Bond, Griffith, Southern Cross and Queensland University of Technology. By providing a lecture theatre setting, we are further preparing our students to succeed in their chosen business, medical, scientific, legal, humanities or personal development fields.

The School will soon receive the NAPLAN summary report in relation to how our students in Year 3, 5, 7 and 9 have collectively performed in relation to their numeracy and literacy levels. The results are late this year as there was an error with the New South Wales government in relation to their numeracy and literacy levels. The results are in line with current research into best practice on the world stage.

These results are a credit to the academic excellence of our teachers and their ability to lift the performance of our students given the fact that we are a non-selective school ie. we do not force prospective students and their families to go through an enrolment selection process whereby we only enrol the top academically able students. This is unlike many of the Sydney schools, who are also ranked in the middle of rankings across the Tweed Region. Additionally, we have also been consistently included in the Sydney Morning Herald’s top 100 New South Wales schools NAPLAN report which resulted in a delay from the government providing the information to schools.

Lindisfarne has consistently excelled year after year and has been ranked as the number one school for outstanding NAPLAN results across the Tweed Region. Additionally, we have also been consistently included in the top 100 New South Wales schools NAPLAN report for a period of three years. These results are a credit to the academic excellence of our teachers in their ability to lift the performance of our students given the fact that we are a non-selective school ie. we do not force prospective students and their families to go through an enrolment selection process whereby we only enrol the top academically able students. This is unlike many of the Sydney schools, who are also ranked in the list, who use such criteria as part of their enrolment selection process.

Our decision to remove streaming of classes based on the academic ability of students at the start of each year in Years 7 and 8 is also in line with current research into best practice on the world stage. Finland, the country currently ranked as the top academic nation for numeracy and literacy on the world OECD data report has focused on teaching mixed ability classes for many years and has seen a dramatic lift in the overall academic achievements of all students. You may ask how can this be? The evidence clearly indicates that when a teacher differentiates a lesson so all students understand what is being taught, they usually end up maintaining a high academic level of teaching rather than simply ‘dumbing down’, for want of a better term, the lesson. Yes, this is more work for teachers and yes, they are to be commended on their ability to successfully differentiate a lesson to cater for the varying learning styles of students but there is far more to it than this. A lesson in which all students are taught with a teacher naturally maintaining a high level of academic understanding, knowledge and delivery will always result in students developing a high level of academic understanding, knowledge and the ability to retain this information. In other words, if you teach at a low level you cannot expect students to achieve at a high level but to teach at a high level, well the evidence from Finland is clear; it works.

Our mission at Lindisfarne is very clear, we help students excel. Our strong reputation will continue to be maintained through being the best school in the region for state-of-the-art educational facilities, providing the best pastoral care for all members of our community, thinking outside of the square to maintain and further develop our academic focus by looking at best practice models across the world, and celebrating in the success of our ability to provide the opportunity of a better future for our graduates. How do we do this? It’s simple. We constantly review our current methods, refine and tune our current practices, and, dare to be the one school with the courage to implement new ideas which are proven to help students excel.

Chapel News
Recently I spent three days with seven Year 9 students. That’s right, three days with seven 15 year olds, six of whom were boys and it was enlightening, to say the least. Not because they behaved in the stereotypical manner of teenagers. Because they didn’t.

They spent three days without the ever-present technological gadgetry they seem to be attached to and survived. They dialogued with the writings of Thomas Merton (each one was presented with 'The Pocket Thomas Merton' and it went with them everywhere they went).

They sat still. They were quiet, very, very quiet. They ate in silence. They listened: to themselves, to creation, to the still small voice within them. They made great discoveries about themselves, creation and the still small voice within them. They were not teenagers, they became who they were before they were born, people in relationship with all that is created. They rediscovered their place in the world and took another step on the only real journey we take in life, the inward journey.

Silent Retreats occur three times a year at the end of Terms 1, 2 & 3. I would encourage you to encourage your children with them everywhere they go).

Human Society and its Environment News
A Global Perspective Starts Locally
To study Geography is to learn about the world around you. Our Year 7 - Year 10 students have participated in several excursions recently with this aim in mind. Year 7 visited the Tweed-Coolangatta region to apply geographic skills such as recording land uses and navigating with a GPS. Year 8 Geographers visited Tweed Shire Council’s Drinking Water Filtration Plant as part of their study of global inequalities and access to fresh water. Year 9 Geography students conducted a walking tour from Point Danger to Tweed Cemetery, learning about past features of the local area and how they have contributed to the identity of the Tweed-Coolangatta community. Examples studied include the Jack Evans Porpoise Pool tourist attraction, the border fence (tick gate), the port of Tweed and rail bringing holiday-makers from Brisbane. Our Year 10 Geographers have been learning about coastal management and town planning issues at Kingscliff and Salt. They have also designed the Tweed’s next urban release at Kings Forest.

Year 9 Geographers Kurtis Boyle, Hamish Sainsbury, Alexander Vu, Thomas Snowball, and Damien Bitancurt at Point Danger.

Year 10 Geographers Jack Dickason, Natasha Simpkins and Emma Smith at Kingscliff.

Kenyan Visitor Speaks With Geographers.
Recently, a visitor from Kenya, Mr David Opondo Mango, shared with our students, the benefit of the Tweed-Kenya Mentoring Program in providing fresh water to the villages in his district. In 2012 and 2013 respectively, Tweed Shire Council engineers Mr Nigel Dobson and Mr Robert Hanby travelled to Kenya. With donations by Council employees and the Tweed community, combined with enthusiastic Kenyan labour, a small dam was rebuilt, water filters were installed at public collection points and a toilet block was built for 250 students at a local school. Our students enjoyed the opportunity of speaking with Mr Mango. Mr Dobson and Mr Hanby about the projects. Our thanks and appreciation are extended to them.

Year 10 students Emma Smith, Samuel Davis-McMillan and Paskelle Dixon-King with Mr Bryson Coverdale and Mr David Opondo Mango from Kenya.
